

Three Wise Kangaroos

Video – answer key

traffic on motorways	When you're not in it, it is rather entertaining. However, nothing's worse than being stuck in traffic. You don't know how long you're going to be stuck in it for, you get out of the car and see nothing, When there's a police car on the motorway, everybody drives 70mph.
farm traffic	Tractors should not be allowed on the road, they are designed for fields going at 5 mph. You have to sit behind a tractor and wait for your opportunity to overtake which requires going into the death lane. There will be one guy typically in a black BMW who will try to overtake from the back. If he succeeds, you feel stripped out of your masculinity. If he, however, misjudges the situation, and tries to go back in again, he won't be let back in.
calling a radio station to warn others about traffic	Nobody in their right mind thinks about calling a radio station when they are stuck in traffic.
hazard lights	There is something exciting about putting the hazard lights on. You use them to warn people behind you that you have broken down or on a motorway to warn other drivers that you have reduced your speed considerably. Hazard lights are also used to thank people.
letting people in	We usually let just one person in but expect some sort of 'thank you' gesture from them.

Vocabulary – answer key

1. oncoming traffic - traffic coming from the opposite direction
2. to swerve - to change direction abruptly
3. traffic is chock-a-block - traffic is bumper to bumper, heavy traffic,
4. hazard lights - the flashing lights you put on when you break down in the car
5. to hit traffic - to encounter congestion on the road